Who we are

Fort Lewis College is Colorado's crossroads of education and adventure, where a uniquely beautiful mountain campus inspires an active and friendly community, and transformative learning experiences foster entrepreneurship, leadership, creativity, and life-long learning.

Values

Our values have evolved from our location and our historical mission. Our setting in the southern Rocky Mountains, between Colorado's San Juan Mountains and the desert Southwest, inspires our senses of adventure, environmental sustainability, and civic engagement. And our hundred-year-long obligation to Native American education fuels our commitments to diversity, democracy, and accessibility.

Setting

The 247-acre Fort Lewis College campus is in southwestern Colorado, situated at 6,872 feet atop a mesa overlooking the Animas River Valley and historic downtown Durango. The campus' distinctive architectural theme utilizes locally quarried sandstone to acknowledge the region's Native Puebloan building style and evokes the Four Corners' landscape and colors.

Mentoring culture

Our faculty pride themselves on personal attention to their students, taking an active interest in their students' progress, tailoring their assistance to each learner's needs, and assisting students with the graduate school application process and finding employment in the field.

"I had some pretty cool professors at FLC. I think that's because they're people who are very like-minded with their students."
