When: May 18–June 26, 2015

Where: Fieldwork will take place within the boundaries of the Petrified Forest National Park, located in Northern Arizona.

What: The field school will provide six weeks of field training in prehistoric archaeology. Students will gain experience in archaeological survey, manual and digital mapping, architectural documentation, and excavation. Field trips to local sites will provide context for the project.

Courses: There are two course offerings:

ANTH 369: Field Training in Archaeology (6 credits). Open to students who have completed ANTH 201 or an equivalent introduction to archaeology class.

ANTH 403: Advanced Archaeological Field Techniques (6 credits). Open to students who have completed an archaeological field school and seek additional field experience.

Cost: Tuition for Colorado residents is $1836.10, and tuition for out-of-state residents is $4020.00. Enrolled tribal members may apply for a tuition waiver. An additional course fee not to exceed $1000.00 will be collected from each student to cover meals and other living expenses.

Questions? Visit our field school website: http://www.fortlewis.edu/fieldschool or contact Dr. Chuck Riggs riggs_c@fortlewis.edu

Applications are due April 1, 2015.