FINANCIAL AID SUSPENSION INFORMATION

If you receive federal, state, or institutional need-based aid or state merit aid, the Office of Financial Aid monitors your grades, course completion rates, and overall attempted hours in order to certify that you are making satisfactory academic progress. Satisfactory academic progress standards are published on the Office of Financial Aid website (www.fortlewis.edu/financialaid). You have been suspended from financial aid because you did not meet those standards. To receive financial aid in the future, you must either be approved for immediate reinstatement through the appeals process or by attending Fort Lewis College without benefit of aid until standards are met.

Reinstatement of Financial Aid through Appeals Process

If you are appealing for immediate reinstatement of aid, please note:

- You must have grounds for appeal that are allowable under federal policy.
- Only complete appeals will be reviewed.
- Late appeals may be reviewed at the committee's next available hearing.
- The Financial Aid Appeals Committee may establish conditions on your reinstatement of aid. These conditions will be communicated along with the committee's decision.

Reinstatement of Financial Aid by Meeting Standards

If you do not have grounds for immediate reinstatement of aid, you can re-establish eligibility by achieving satisfactory progress standards while attending Fort Lewis College without benefit of federal, state, or institutional need-based aid. Once you have met standards you must submit a new appeal form.

Important Information for Students with Institutional Scholarships

If you have been suspended from federal, state, or institutional need-based financial aid or state merit aid, you may also be suspended from your scholarship funding. To review the terms and conditions for each of your scholarships, log into WebOPUS and go to Student Services > Financial Aid > Terms and Conditions. If you have failed to meet scholarship standards, you must contact the office or agency that awarded you the scholarship. For more information, go to www.fortlewis.edu/scholarships.
